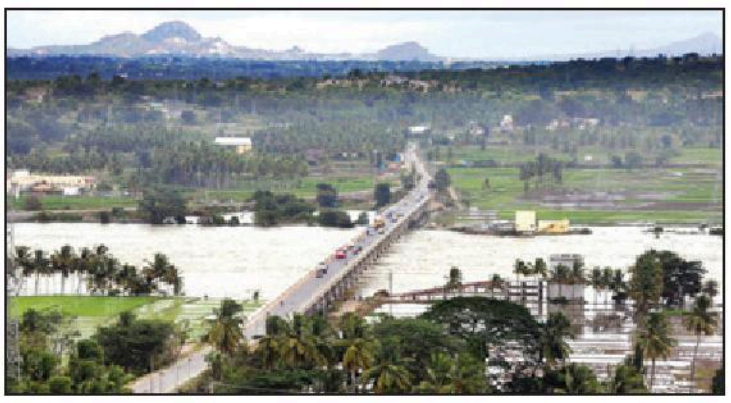
Trial blasts at KRS Dam

Farmers to launch 'Go Back' campaign tomorrow

Mandya, Jan.27 (Nagaiah& BCT)- The trial blast scheduled to be conducted tomorrow (Jan.28) by a team of scientists from Central Water and Power Research Station (CWPRS), Pune, to study the impact of stone quarrying in the Krishna Raja Sagar (KRS) Dam area has met with stiff opposition by farmers and members of Karnataka Rajya Raitha Sangha (KRRS), who have planned a protest at the Dam site. They are planning a 'Go Back' campaign tomorrow.

Scientists from CWPRS, Pune, under the Union Ministry of Water Resources, River Development and Ganga Rejuvenation, is scheduled to examine the ground vibrations during the trial blasts to see if they will potentially damage the reservoir. The four-member team, headed by Dr. Ghosh, has already arrived in Mysuru and will leave for KRS tomorrow.



The Mandya District Administration has permitted the team to carry out the blasts and the Cauvery Neeravari Nigam Limited (CNNL) will bear the team's expenditure of Rs.19.25 lakh.

Farmer rights activists, under the banner Cauvery Ulisi Janandolana Samiti, have questioned the District Administration's intention to conduct a trial blast without intimating the public.

According to officials, experts have already conducted 11 days of inspection at various stone quarry units in the vicinity of the reservoir from Dec.6, 2018.

Farmers and social activists are arguing that the study should be conducted under the supervision of Union Ministry of Environment, Forest and Climate Change. "The Karnataka State Natural Disaster Monitoring Centre (KSNDMC) has already recommended a ban on mining activities around KRS and now what is the need of another Government agency to conduct trial blasts," they asked.

(See KRS DAM on page 9)

Minister reacts

The trial blasts will be conducted by Central Water and Power Research Station, a Central Government agency, from tomorrow. If it is established that mining blasts are threatening KRS, all mining activities will be permanently banned."

Tea seller's daughter

marches at Republic Day Parade in New Delhi; makes city proud

Mysuru, Jan.27 (MTY&BCT)- If thirty-year-old Major Khushboo Kanwar, daughter of a bus conductor from Jaipur in Rajasthan created history by commanding the all-woman contingent of the Assam Rifles in the 70th Republic Day Parade at Rajpath in New Delhi yesterday, M.R. Chandana, the daughter of a tea vendor in Mysuru, made the city proud as she marched along with the NCC contingent at the Parade.

While Major Khushboo led the all-women contingent of the Assam Rifles (it was for the first time in the history of Assam Rifles, the oldest Paramilitary Force that an all-woman contingent participated), it was a matter of pride and privilege for Chandana as she was the only female participant from Mysuru from the Army Wing to be a part of the historic event.

She was picked from a pool of 1,800 candidates (Army Wing) under the Karnataka and Goa NCC Directorate after strenuous mental and physical tests. Chandana is a student of JSS Women's Polytechnic.

Chandana's father Rajendra runs 'Vani Tiffins,' a small tea shop near Kuppanna Park in city and the family survives out of the income generated by the tea shop. "My daughter is dedicated and hardworking and I am glad that she is representing Mysuru in New Delhi, marching for India amidst VVIPs including the President and the Prime Minister. It is all due to her efforts. She has proved that people coming from humble backgrounds too can reach the top," says Rajendra.

EDITOR'S BOTTOMLINE

The most popular subject for photos after selfies are foodos: photos we take of the food we are about to eat. In many cultures, it was customary, and still is in many cases, to say a brief prayer of thanksgiving before people partook of the meal put before them.

This ritual has been replaced, partially or completely, by another semi-religious rite, which is to photograph whatever it is that we are about to tuck into.

Actually, as selfies are called selfies, the photos we take of our food should be called foodies. But foodies already means people who enjoy eating, so in order to avoid confusion, food photos have to make do with being called foodos. What is it about us, or about the food we eat, which compels us to take foodos? The food we take photos of could be anything and everything: a Chef's Special Platter in a 5-star restaurant, a home-delivery pizza, or even the khichdi you've made in your own kitchen.

It doesn't matter. If we're going to eat it, we first have to take the time to shoot it, and make sure it's picture perfect, no matter how hungry we are, and dying to dig in. If selfies are a form of narcissism, or self-love, foodos — the pictures we take of our food and post on Facebook and other social media for everyone we know, and a whole lot of people we don't, to ooh and ah over — are also a way of saying 'Love me, love my me-nu'. Like selfies, foodos are here to stay, and are gaining more and more adherents every day. I'm just hoping that some innovative individual doesn't come up with the next logical step to the foodo: taking pictures of what the food looks like the next morning after it's been eaten. —Jug Suraiya in The Times of India

Smart treadmill for cats

Seoul: A Korean company has claimed to have created a smart exercise machine that can keep felines in tip-top shape even when their owners are away. There's just one catch – it costs $1,800.

Korean startup Pet Ding unveiled its smart treadmill for cats at CES Las Vegas. The Little Cat relies on LED lights to motivate cats to exercise, allows owners to check on the cat's activity when they're away and record encouragement voice messages for their pet, and a companion app lets users set fitness goals for their purring felines. The smart exercise machine features an auto mode that promises to "provide the ideal workout program for your cat, and manage workout patterns," but also lets users who want to get more involved in their cat's workout control the speed of the treadmill.

Sniffer dog has £25,000 bounty put on his head

Pembrokeshire: Scamp, a sniffer dog, is so good at his job that criminal organisations have put £25,000 bounty on his head.

During his five-year career as a sniffer dog for BWY Canine, in Pembrokeshire, UK, Scamp managed to detect around £6m ($7.8 million) worth of illegal tobacco, causing significant headaches for criminal organisations specialized in tobacco smuggling. But while Scamp's powerful sense of smell has earned him praises from both his handler and Police, it also made him a target for the nasty people whose plans he keeps foiling. As if causing criminals to lose millions of pounds wasn't bad enough, Scamp also likes to rub it in by posing for Instagram pictures with his huge hauls and isn't the first sniffer dog to have a bounty put on his head. "I've also had death threats, my windscreen has been smashed and my tyres slashed," the dog handler added.

Let the park be used as a park

Sir,

On Adichunchanagiri Road, near RMP Colony and behind Banashankari Temple, there is a Park. It is a known fact that it has not been developed for many years for the best reasons known to MUDA/ MCC.

First there were four flood-light posts. Recently another four such lights were added. Now attempts are made to erect four more such light posts. Two pits are seen dug for putting up two little toilets. Two plastic water tanks are also kept there.

Is it not known to the authorities concerned that such illegal activities should not be allowed? Is it a Government project or being done by vested interests?

The said park is used by nearby residents for morning/ evening walk. Children used to play there very happily. Why such lung space is allowed for commercial activities? Will it not give room for eve-teasing and chain-snatching activities? I am surprised as to how this has not caught the attention of local MLA/ Corporator?

I request the MLA/ MUDA/ MCC/ Corporator to give urgent attention, stop the illegal activities and ALLOW THE PARK TO BE USED AS PARK and develop it by planting saplings so that people can use it properly.

'Freedom fighters are our asset'

Mysuru, Jan.27 (SR)- "Freedom fighters are asset to the nation," said former Speaker of Karnataka State Legislative Assembly Krishna here.

He was speaking after garlanding the bust of Mahatma Gandhi at Freedom Fighter's Park in Subbarayanakere here yesterday marking the 70th Republic Day celebrations organised by Mysuru District Freedom Fighters Association.

"Our country got freedom at Midnight of August 14-15, 1947. It was the result of decades of sacrifice and valour on the part of our ancestors and our revered freedom fighters. These were men and women of rare courage and foresight. They came from all regions of the country, all sections of society, all communities and all social and economic groups. They could have easily compromised and settled for some personal benefit, but they did not. We are fortunate that some of freedom fighters are still living among us today," he said.

Krishna said that people are ignorant about the presence of this Park in city. There is a need to bring school and college students to this park to remind them the contributions of freedom fighters to the nation, he added.

Expressing his displeasure on the demand to review Indian Constitution, he said that such a demand is not a wise move. However, he defended the move on electoral reforms of making SSLC pass a must to contest in Gram Panchayat polls. Likewise, a minimum qualification should be made mandatory to represent Lok Sabha, Vidhana Sabha, various Boards and Corporations, other highest decision making Bodies in the nation, he added.

Corporator Pramila Bharath, Mysuru District Freedom Fighters Association President Krishnamurthy, Rangashetty, Revanna, Mysuru Kannada Vedike President Balakrishna, former Kannada Development Authority Member M.B. Vishwanath, Ravi, Karunakar and others were present during the event.

Treating victims of poisoning cases

24x7 Poison Information Centre at JSS Hospital

By Dr. M. Suresh Babu and Dr. L. Umesh

The Poison Information Centre at JSS Hospital.

The society watched with horror the prasadam poisoning in the mass food poisoning case in Kichuguth Maramma Temple at Sulwadi village of Hanur taluk recently where over 17 people died and many more were admitted to various hospitals.

Sadly, some people lost their lives even before they could get access to medical management. Samples of the prasadam forwarded to the forensic team had traces of Organophosphate Poison (OP) capable of causing critical damage to human beings. Here is a review of Organophosphate Poisoning seen in our day-to-day practice.

Organophosphate poisoning is one of the most common causes of poisoning worldwide. Organophosphates are used as insecticides and organophosphate poisoning occurs most commonly as a suicide attempt in farming areas of the developing world and less commonly by accident. The case fatality rate is more than 15%. The range of toxicity of different Organophosphate poisons is as follows:

Highly toxic: TEPP, Phorate, Mevinphos, Fensulfothion, Demeton, Parathion, Fonophos, and Monocrotophos.

Intermediate toxic: Coumaphos, Crotoxyphos, Fenitrothion and Ronnel.

Low toxic: Malathion, Fenthion, Abate, Chlorpyrifos.

The poison that was used in the prasadam poisoning case was the highly toxic Monocrotophos.

The route of poisoning is through ingestion, inhalation and dermal contact. And the onset of action is oral: within 2 hours; dermal: delayed up to 12 hours and inhalation: Within 30 minutes of exposure.

Common signs and symptoms of acute toxicity

DUMBELS: Diarrhoea (loose motion), Urination, Miosis (constriction of pupil), Bronchospasm (breathlessness), Emesis (vomiting), Lacrimation and Salivation. Other common signs and symptoms include muscle fasciculations and weakness, seizures, respiratory depression and decreased heart rate. Symptoms may occur within 5 minutes following a large ingestion and death is possible within 15 minutes. Most patients will be symptomatic within 8 hours of exposure, nearly all within 24 hours.

Children often do not present with the classic DUMBELS syndrome. More commonly, they experience Central Nervous System (CNS) effects with seizures, lethargy, stupor, coma, muscle weakness and flaccidity.

Mechanism of Toxicity: Organophosphates cause irreversible inhibition of cholinesterase enzymes, resulting in excess accumulation of acetylcholine at muscarinic and nicotinic receptors, and in periphery and CNS. Signs and symptoms of organophosphate poisoning are an expression of acetylcholine excess at a variety of nerve terminals.

Monitoring parameters: Pulse rate, pseudocholine esterase, blood gas analysis, pupil size and delirium.

Treatment: Gastric lavage is recommended (generally within 60 minutes). Contaminated clothing has to be removed with regular body wash. Immediate life-threatening complications, for example, airway, breathing, and circulation have to be managed. The most common serious complications are seizures, seizure-related hypoxia, and respiratory failure. A clear airway has to be established and excess secretions have to be suctioned. Trial blasts at KRS Dam

They have alleged that district administration has succumbed to the pressure from mining barons and given permission for the trial blasts. Trial blasts, without precautionary measures, will affect the Dam. "We will not allow the CWPRS team to conduct the trial blast and will launch a 'Go Back' campaign," they said.

Mandya Deputy Commissioner N. Manjushree said that the team will conduct blasts for five days and the people who conduct the blasts are licence holders. Movements will be restricted around the Dam for five days and power supply will be switched off for the team to study the impact of the blasts, she said.

Speaking to Star of Mysore, CNNL Executive Engineer Basavarajegowda said that the only intention of permitting the trial blasts was to ensure the safety of the KRS Dam. "We have not colluded with the miners and there is no politics in this. Blasting during stone extraction results in major ground vibrations and they may also cause damage to the KRS. Hence, we had requested the Mandya District Administration to issue permission to conduct trial blasts," he said. A technical report with suggestions will be given to the DC after the completion of five-day trial blasts and examinations. CWPRS is one of the premier and prestigious institutions in India, he added.
